Indigenous Agri-Conference Event Summary

The Indigenous Agri-Conference is a multi-day event dedicated to strengthening Indigenous participation and leadership in agriculture across British Columbia. This gathering brings together Indigenous producers, community leaders, policy makers, and innovators to explore opportunities in land-based projects, agri-tourism, food sovereignty, technology, business planning, and co-operative development.

The conference offers panel discussions, keynote presentations, cultural programming, and networking opportunities, creating a platform for collaboration, education, and investment in Indigenous agriculture. A special feature includes a high-value training focused on ranching profitability and sustainability, offering hands-on support to emerging and established Indigenous agri-entrepreneurs. This event aims to empower communities, spark innovation, and build meaningful partnerships to advance Indigenous agriculture for generations to come.
